Jim McClellan, host, interviewed Jessie Salgado from "Friendship Unlimited", a halfway-house for prostitutes who want to change their life-styles. Friendship Unlimited offers medical attention, help with education and a safe place for the prostitute and her children. Jessie Salgado stated that prostitution is a crime against women that often involves abuse and death. Taxpayers are victims as well because they pay the cost of the arrests. Many times drugs are involved as well as gangs and the Mafia. Salgado reminded viewers that prostitutes are people who are hurting, who need to be treated as a person with dignity and respect and suggested ways viewers could help by volunteering to be a friend.

Jim McClellan introduced his guest, Lisa Horne, coordinator of the Neighborhood Crime Prevention Program. She stated that there is more biased crime targeted at specific persons of race, and more gang related crime, even in the suburban and rural areas, than ever before. She explained how the Citizen Foot Patrol is a community patrol effort using walkie-talkies and mobile phones to report suspicious activities. One Portland area's prostitution problem has disappeared due to community patrol. Lisa encouraged viewers to communicate with their neighbors and report crimes to their local police.

Host, Jim McClellan, introduced Patrick Donaldson, Executive Director for the Citizens Crime Commission of Portland and President of the National Association of Citizens Crime Commission. Donaldson stated that crime against children and women is increasing primarily because people have resorted to violence to resolve conflicts instead of relying on the system. Lack of respect for other people and their property has also contributed to the rise in crime. He en-

	Jim's guest today was Assistant Chief Dave Williams of the Portland Police Bureau. He related how "Community Policing" had become a more effective way of solving crime in neighborhoods since it is a shared effort with the citizens of the community. Portland's Washington Park was popular for its drug dealing and other criminal activities until citizens began patrolling in pairs, wearing brightly colored jackets and using mobilephones to report any criminal activities. Williams encouraged other cities with high crime to initiate "Community Policing".

	Jim McClellan welcomed his guest, Captain Dan Noelle of the Portland Police Bureau, who explained that "bias" crime is any crime motivated by a prejudice to race, religion, cultural or sexual differences. He said that in the state of Oregon, race is the highest among "bias" crime. He stated that the solution is to clearly identify what a "bias" crime is through thorough investigation, establish open communication with police, and report crime whenever they see it.

	PTL hosts, Jim and Connie McClellan, discussed the homosexual agenda with Phil Hobizal, Director of the Portland Fellowship and former homosexual. He related that the issue with the homosexual community is to acquire society's acceptance. They want visibility, affirmation of their lifestyle, and their values to be incorporated into

Phil explained that there is no biological proof that gays are born that way, but instead believes it is a learned behavior, and one can change if willing to allow Christ into this area of his or her life.

	Jim and Connie McClellan host today's program, welcoming guests, Dan and Jody Mayhew of the Portland Fellowship. Jody, a counselor at the Portland Fellowship, stated that Portland has the largest gay/lesbian community in the nation. She said that the way to reach out to the homosexual is not through law, but to see homosexuality as the issue and not attack the person. She suggested that when speaking with friends who are gay, talk about the facts and not the feelings. It is important to help them deal with the truth of their dysfunction and remember to pray for them.

	Lon Mabon, Chairman of the Oregon Citizens Alliance and President of the Christian Coalition of Oregon, was Jim's guest. The basis of "Measure 9" and the advancement of the homosexual agenda was discussed. Mabon stated that recently, the homosexual community had intensified it's political goal. In the 1950's and 1960's they only wanted tolerance and to be left alone. Now, they are seeking affirmation as "normal". He explained that "Measure 9" was initiated to stop the advancement of their agenda. Mabon reiterated that the OCA does not "hate" homosexuals but strives to keep Godly values and the Bible as part of our society.

HOMOSEXUALITY/ GAY RIGHTS (cont)	THE 700 CLUB #1020-92 Pat Robertson, host, introduced Beverly LaHaye, who discussed a bill being introduced into Congress which gives homosexuals the same rights and privileges as married couples and will introduce new materials into schools promoting homosexuality. This bill, by Ted Kennedy, was quietly "walked" through and Beverly stated anyone opposing it has been blocked from public TV. Pat points out that Clinton has promised to sign this bill if elected.	58:20	7:00	Rec	PA/O	10-20-92	12:00P
DISCRIMINATION/ MINORITIES	NORTHWEST FOCUS #1118-92 Host, Dr. O. Virginia Phillips, welcomed Dr. Boone Sumantri, Director of the Multi-Cultural Task Group. The Task Group's objectives are to network churches and ethnic ministries, provide interaction between ethnic groups and meet the social needs of the ethnic community accessing the resources. Sumantri stated that there are 150,000 ethnic people in the Portland area. This population is 10% of the Metroplex and only 10% of that is churchd. The Task Group is working to raise this percentage to 20% in the next two years.	28:30	23:00	L	PA/O	11-18-92 11-25-92	8:30A 2:00A
	NORTHWEST FOCUS #1202-92 Dr. O. Virginia Phillips, interviewed Terry Cross, Director of the Northwest Indian Child Welfare Association, and Professor at Portland State University. Cross explained that the Indian population is growing rapidly, reaching 2 1/2 million in 1990. This rapid growth has brought with it a high rate of school drop-outs, alcoholism and unemployment. Training is needed for the American Indian to be functional in today's society while keeping hold of their unique heritage. He encouraged viewers to participate in cross-cultural training and to become accepting and knowledgeable of different cultures.	28:30	23:00	L	PA/O	12-02-92 12-09-92	8:30A 2:00A

	Dr. O. Virginia Phillips, host, interviewed Amelia Lanier, co-owner of "Karla's Seafood Delights", the only seafood business in the nation solely operated by women. Amelia related the difficulties she experienced as a black, single woman starting a small business. Some discrimination occurred when neighboring businesses told her they didn't appreciate her as a black woman in business and that she would not be successful. Often opposition came from inflexible businessmen who assume women, minorities and Christians don't know what they are doing in the business world. She stressed the importance of being efficient, not compromising your principles and policies and having a product that sells, priced fairly.

	Jim McClellan welcomed his guest, Sandy Templeman from the Hispanic Program of Catholic Community Services. Sandy explained that immigration is seen more and more throughout the state of Oregon with 15,000 to 30,000 Hispanics settling in East County. Some of the problems they are facing are language barriers, unemployment, poor health care and limited eligibility for social services because of non-citizenship. Much of the discrimination against Hispanics, she explained, is due to ignorance and misunderstanding of the people and their culture. She suggested communication and involvement with cultural agencies as ways to help the Hispanic community.

DISCRIMINATION/ MINORITIES (cont)	there are many black families who want to adopt, but the process is very difficult. Typically, only 8 to 10 families out of 100 end up being eligible. He said the key is to have a family adopt a child of their own race because children connect better culturally and socially. He stated that this is not racial discrimination, but ensures that children know who they are.
	NORTHWEST FOCUS #1230-92	28:30	23:00	L	PA/O	12-30-92 8:30A
	Dr. Phillips welcomed her guest, Linda Mitchell, Case Manager for "Mother Care". The "Mother Care" program serves primarily single mothers and pregnant women of color, providing them with prenatal care. She spoke of the infant mortality rate being high among women of color largely because many lack the knowledge of prenatal care and other basic life skills.

	Jim McGlellan welcomed guest, Dr. O. Virginia Phillips, Co-founder of "Give Us This Day, Inc.", an organization involved in bridge building for adoptive families. Dr. Phillips stated there is a great need for black families to adopt black children so those children can learn their own cultural heritage at home. Families who adopt kids of different races than their own need help in adjusting and intergrating other cultural values. This is important because society will treat those children according to their racial origin in spite of how they were raised. Children with inter-racial parents also need to be aware of bi-racial issues.

	Jay Sekulow, host, talked about Christians in New York who have been denied public access to hotels and restaurants because of their beliefs. In L.A., a group met in a garage for Bible study and were denied the right to do so because it was a "religious" meeting. There is intellectual bigotry, hostility and animosity towards Christians, which is illegal, and it is time to take action against this. Home-schoolers are being denied public access. Jay tells viewers if we don't use our rights, we will lose them.

	Rev. Bob McNeil from Oregonians Concerned About Addiction Problems (OCAP), was Jim McClellan's guest. He spoke of his own personal experience with addictions and co-dependancy in his family. Rev. McNeil shared that 10% to 20% of the children born today are drug affected and 10% to 20% of the population is alcoholic or drug addicted. Often this is because of family history, peer influence and the easy accessibility of drugs and alcohol. He stressed the importance of drug education in the schools and churches focussing on prevention.

	Chuck Schreiner, evaluation specialist for Sandy Family Services, is Jim McClellan's guest. He said that as an evaluation specialist he determines the amount of alcohol or drugs a person has consumed. He stated that the majority of his clients are single males, averaging about 37 years of age. The number of his clients is increasing suggesting that the drug and alcohol problem is increasing as well. 75 to 85% of the women clients have experienced either sexual or emotional abuse in direct association with the abuse of alcohol and drugs. Schreiner advised families to face the problems, not run away, and for parents to be good examples for their children.

	Jerry and Carol Robeson, hosts, greeted guests, Doug Willis and Troy Smith of S.A.F.E.(Setting Addicts Free Eternally). Smith shared how he had come out of an alcoholic background after leaving the Vietnam War. He said the root problem is not the addiction, but rather the need for emotional stability. Many people have been conditioned since childhood towards certain behavioral patterns, so re-conditioning is vital for recovery. A technique called "Spiritual/Scriptural Saturation" is what S.A.F.E. uses to change the alcohol or drug addict's perception of himself and God.

	Nancy Wolfe was the guest on today's show hosted by David and Holly Hummel. In 1980, Nancy's daughter was killed by a drunk driver. Since that time she had been a spokesperson for M.A.D.D. (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers) She stated that since the 1980's, drunk driving accidents have reduced by 20%. M.A.D.D.'s campaign to remind people not to drive drunk over the holidays involves tying a red ribbon on your car. Life Tow and MADD Cab are other alternatives for those who need a ride home.

	Host, Jim McClellan, and guest, Deputy Chief Chuck Karl of the Portland Police Bureau, discussed the continuing war on drugs. Deputy Chief Karl said that today more people are aware of the dangers of drugs, but heroine and cocaine use are still on the increase especially among the youth. He stated that 60% of arrests are drug related; 90% if you include alcohol. The solution is a greater effort in fighting the drug problem with more law enforcement, task forces and closer screening by businesses and landlords.

	Pastor Larry Huch, guest of John and Ruthanne Jacobs, related how he started using drugs in high school and when he started college he was not only using but dealing, impressed by how much money he could make. He then went to Colombia where he was into dealing for 8 or 9 years. He started mainlining and nearly died, throwing up and choking on his own vomit. He called out to God but was not saved until later. He related to audience that people who do drugs are looking for something and that Jesus is a relationship, not a religion.

	Dr. Phillips' guest today was Laurie Breckel, Coordinator of P.R.E.P.; Portland's Released-Time Education Program. The program allows children to be excused from the classroom for religious instruction for 2 hours per week and up to 5 hours per week for high school students. The program has proven to be a solution to curbing the problems of moral decay and peer pressure in the schools. She stressed that parental involvement and volunteers are desperately needed.

	Stephen Kafoury, Chairman of the Board of Education, Portland Public Schools, and host, Jim McClellan, discuss education and effects of "Measure 5". He stated that school finance is now very uncertain. The system has already lost $50 million dollars from a $450 million dollar budget. Because the student population is growing the financial needs have become greater. Kafoury spoke of a curriculum called CATS PLAN which would allow students to combine their regular studies with vocational studies, broadening their fields and at the same time showing them the importance of the basics.

	Dennis Tuuri of Parents Education Association, joined Jim on today's program to talk about the advantages of home-schooling. He said he prefers homeschooling over public education because the public school is teaching everything apart from God. In the homeschool environment a child can be taught the truths of God and values of the parent. Children are often one grade ahead of public school children and flexibility and choice of curriculum are positive features. He encouraged parents that it is never too late to start homeschooling and materials and support groups are available.

	Jerry and Carol Robeson greeted their guest, Greg Harris, Director of the Christian Life Workshops. Harris told of his past experience as a homeschooler. He now directs workshops to help equip families in homeschooling and Christian education. He explained how the public schools are becoming more and more unsafe, with values confused. He attributes some of the academic excellence of homeschooling to the absence of peer pressure and to the sense of safety homeschool provides.

	Kurt Billings, author and former New Age Channellor, and host, Jim McClellan, discussed "Education 2000". Billings stated that the curriculum of "Education 2000" is designed to destroy Christianity and focuses on New Age philosophies. Goals of the New Age Education include instructing children to: 1) accept a New World Government and world citizenship; 2) destroy patriotism; 3) accept all religions as equal; 4) rebel against parents who do not co-operate with these teachings. He added that the Master's Program for teachers includes astrology and Eastern religions. Billings urged parents to consider the Christian School or homeschooling for their children as well as becoming good role models.

	Bill Buck, Principal of Portland Christian Elementary School, joined Jim McClellan, host, to talk about the benefits of Christian Education. Mr. Buck shared his belief that parents are the first and foremost educators of children and school cannot effectively educate children without involvement and partnership of the parents. He stated that the most important curriculum is the teacher, whom he calls "Living Curriculum". Although many secular schools have teachers and parents who are dedicated, there is often a conflict of values. Christian Education, he said, is a safe place for kids to bring honest questions and get honest answers and where values at home are supported at school.

	Chris Mitchell reported that parents are uprising over the "Children of the Rainbow" curriculum being forced on schools, that teaches homosexuality. Parents feel their rights are being taken away and this literature should not be taught in the classroom. This has also caused death threats, threats toward board members for voting against this and manipulation against the people for voting their opinion. While this has taken place in New York, the ramifications are national.

	Patrick Donaldson from the Citizens Crime Commission joined Jim McClellan, host, to discuss the crime problem in Portland. He stated that crime is continuing to escalate, but criminals are not held accountable for their crimes and are being released from prison earlier and earlier. Violent crime is especially rampant because people have lost faith in the system and are taking it upon themselves to solve conflicts with violence. Donaldson believes that citizens must take action against crime by speaking out to city council members and commissioners with opinions and possible solutions.

They stated that in most states assisted suicide is still against the law. In the state of Michigan the law against it just passed due to Dr. Kavorkian's activities with his "death machine". Burnett stated that the media and our changing culture are attempting to convince people that killing under certain conditions is okay. However, Burnett said it is still considered a crime that society should not tolerate.

Jim McClellan introduced his guest, Lisa Horne, coordinator of the Neighborhood Crime Prevention Program. She stated that there is more biased crime targeted at specific persons of race, and more gang related crime, even in the suburban and rural areas, than ever before. She explained how the Citizen Foot Patrol is a community patrol effort using walkie-talkies and mobile phones to report suspicious activities. One Portland area's prostitution problem has disappeared due to community patrol. Lisa encouraged viewers to communicate with their neighbors and report crimes to their local police.

Jim McClellan welcomed his guest, Captain Dan Noelle of the Portland Police Bureau, who explained that "bias" crime is any crime motivated by a prejudice to race, religion, cultural or sexual differences. He said that in the state of Oregon, race is the highest among "bias" crime. He stated that the solution is to clearly identify what a "bias" crime is through thorough investigation, establish open communication with police, and report crime whenever they see it.

Today Jim's guest was Assistant Chief Dave Williams of the Portland Police Bureau. He related how "Community Policing" had become a more effective way of solving crime in neighborhoods since it is a shared effort with the citizens of the community. Portland's Washington Park was popular for its drug dealing and other criminal activities until citizens began patrolling in pairs, wearing brightly colored jackets and using mobile phones to report any criminal activities. Williams encouraged other cities with high crime to initiate "Community Policing".

Mark Marciel from Calvary Chapel, Downey, is a Chaplain for Main Central Jail. He shared how he had been a prisoner for 3 years due to gang involvement, drugs and organized crime. He spoke of a 300% increase in the prison population with California state prisons numbering 24,000 inmates. The reason inmates go back to prison again and again is because they often accept their time serving as just part of life. Most have no home to go to so prison becomes their home with most of their physical needs met. He commented that the prison system never changes the heart of a man, but a commitment to Christ can. He urged churches to become more involved in evangelistic prison ministry.

Jim McClellan interviewed Mark Hubbell, Area Director for Oregon Prison Fellowship. He stated that prisons are not cutting down on crime as three out of four prisoners will be arrested again within four years. He stated the costs to be $82,000 to build a cell and $1,700 per year to house an inmate. He believes that keeping the family of an inmate together can have a positive affect on his having a good start when he is released. Education, support groups and compassion are also important solutions.

Don McMillan, Chaplain of the Portland Police Bureau, was Jim's guest today. As chaplain, his main job is crisis intervention. He stated that in Portland, 1 million people are under stress due to crisis. Many are perpetrators of crime as well as crime victims. He said crime today has become more and more violent and more and more drug oriented. He suggested that churches provide a safe place for victims and viewers contact their police and fire department to find Bill Hartner, the director and founder of H.E.L.P., "Help Eliminate Learning Problems" tells Jim McClellan there is a correlation between crime and learning problems. He stated that 87% of juvenile delinquents have learning problems and 40% become criminals at a higher level of crime. He said the solution is to encourage physical activities, develop creative abilities, do a one-on-one teaching, and offer alternatives to a different lifestyle.

	Sgt. Mel Hedgpeth from the Multnomah County Sheriff's Office, and Jim McClellan discussed crime and why it goes up during the summer months. Hedgpeth said this is due to more children being out on the street and the fact that alcohol intake increases. Tourists are prime targets because they are unfamiliar with the area they are visiting and do not properly secure their homes when they leave. He told viewers to watch and report anything suspicious, get license numbers and form a neighborhood watch program.

	Richard Hunt, CBN reporter, covers the story on Westley Alan Dodd, convicted killer who had been sentenced to die. Dodd had a history of criminal sex problems from childhood and bragged that he knew how to beat the system, stay out of jail and continue to molest. He asked the court for the death penalty, stating if it was not granted, he would go on killing, molesting and raping, enjoying every minute

Ben Schellenberg, Superintendent of North Clackamas School District, was guest today hosted by Dale and Margi Gallaway. Schellenberg stated that public schools tend to ignore teaching positive characteristic qualities. However, five years ago, his district formed a committee for character education consisting of lawyers, businessmen, law enforcement officials, ministers and citizens, who believed quality characteristics such as honesty, respect for others, and self-discipline, should be taught in the schools. Today, these fundamental values are part of the curriculum at 26 Clackamas schools. He stressed that positive Christian influences make profound differences in the schools and parents should become involved.

Dr. O. Virginia Phillips interviewed Lurlene Shamsud-Din, Coordinator of the Sabin Demonstration School. She stated that education today is facing a dire need for a strong administration and a safe, clean environment. Problems exist because of the lack of parental involvement and because of the collapse of relationship amongst home, community and school. The Sabin Demonstration School is helping students through cooperative learning and mentor programs functioning within a safe, nurturing environment. She encouraged parents to support programs like her's and be aware and educated of the issues.

	Jim Hill, Director of National American Family Association and Citizens for Public Education, joins Jim McClellan on today's show. Hill spoke of the recent SAT scores of Oregon this past year being the highest in the nation. Standardization of curriculum is taking place, but still each school board has the chance to decide which curriculum to use. He urges parents to get involved and voice their opinion concerning curriculum. Most parents don't simply because they are not informed.

	Bill Hartner, Director of H.E.L.P., (Helping Eliminate Learning Problems), joined host, Jim McClellan. Hartner shared that his own experience with dyslexia inspired him to start H.E.L.P. He stated that there are more than 150 kinds of dyslexia that people generally term "learning disabilities". Many people with dyslexia are told they are dumb, which leads to discouragement and often drug/alcohol abuse or gang involvement. He said there needs to be changes in teaching that include more presentations, group activities, creative thinking and artistic development as well as one-on-one instruction so the student is not compared to others.

	Jim McClellan, host, greeted guest, Gregg Harris, Director of the Christian Life Workshops. He stated that public education is age-segregated so students tend to be peer-dependant and lack respect for authorities. Drug dealing, homosexual recruiting, violence, and the rejection of Judeo-Christian values are also growing concerns. Harris believes homeschooling protects children from these influences and offers a better opportunity for children to succeed academically.
